Executive Presence for Women: Owning Your Power Without Shrinking It

Nance MacLeod

Career Compass Canada

Executive presence is often defined by outdated leadership norms that don't reflect the full range of how women lead today. This talk challenges those norms providing practical strategies to help women lead with confidence, clarity, and authenticity—without compromising who they are. Beneficial to ALL Women looking to strengthen their leadership presence.

You'll Learn: How to project confidence and credibility in high-stakes environments; Strategies to communicate with clarity, authority; Ways to navigate the balance between being respected and approachable; Practical tools to strengthen presence in meetings, presentations, decision making moments and How to manage bias without internalizing it. Executive presence is not about fitting into traditional models of leadership—it's about expanding what effective leadership looks like.

Nance MacLeod brings over 20 years of experience in executive coaching, leadership development, and change management. She partners with organizations and global leaders to deliver tailored, evidence based solutions that focus on the human side of business transformation. Her work spans executive coaching, mentoring, and 360 feedback, helping leaders and teams strengthen effectiveness while aligning people strategies with business goals. She is known for her ability to bring clarity to complexity—combining sharp strategic thinking with intuitive empathy to help leaders focus on what truly matters.
